

A perfect gentleman

Vivian Woodward was a prolific goalscorer for Spurs and England, but it was his insistence on maintaining both a rigorously fair approach and the amateur spirit which has secured his enduring lagacy in the history of English football

'Called "Sir" by team-mates and even opponents, he earned universal and absolute respect for his courtesy, insistence on fair play and refusal to make a penny out of his sporting prowess'

the units 20 susulane, but of term final, fee externed to the sections was more more than the contract of the terrories was more more than the contract of the terrories was more more than the contract of the terrories was more more than the contract of the terrories was more more than the contract of the terrories was more of the terrories was more than the contract of the terrories was the terrories was the contract of the terrories was more than the contract of the terrories was the terrories when the contract of the terrories was the terrories and the terrories was the terrories and the terrories was the terrories and the terro